'The Victorian Christmas' by Denise Beddows - historian & author

This talk explores the various traditions associated with Christmas, New Year and other winter festivals even far beyond, and working out why we still continue with these fripperies and frivolities today. Some of the origins of things we still do today are surprising. I look also at how other faiths celebrate the winter solstice.

The Life and Curious Wartime Death of the Duke of Kent (1902 - 42)

An illustrated talk by Tony Eaton Amateur Historian

In August 1942, Prince George - the Duke of Kent - set out on a special mission, only to be killed in a mysterious air crash on a remote Scottish hillside. All documents relating to the crash have since gone missing as part of what increasingly looks like a concerted effort to airbrush him from public memory Hugely popular with the British public in the 1930s he is now the Forgotten Prince.There are no statues, no Royal biographies and no hospitals, charities or causes bearing his name. Sensitive records remain embargoed - protected by the 100-year non-disclosure rule accorded, uniquely, to the Royal Archives at Windsor. In this new talk, Tony Eaton separates the facts from the fiction and reveals the secrets behind this hidden part of our World War 2 history.
